Educational Integrity: Values in Teaching, Learning & Research

Newcastle, Australia, 2nd - 3rd December 2005

During its 40th anniversary year, the University of Newcastle is delighted to be hosting APEIC 2005. With the exponential growth of electronically available information, recent developments to communication and information technology, and growth in the global education market, the focus on educational and academic integrity has intensified. APEIC 2005 will address issues on academic integrity, values and ethics in teaching, learning and research.

Conference & Workshops: Focus and Audience

In this area of increasing importance to the education sector, a broad spectrum of managers, practitioners and support staff will attend the APEIC 2005 Conference. Delegates will include educators, managers in education, academic support staff, academic developers, researchers, learning support units, librarians and quality unit staff from all education sectors: higher education, school, vocational, technical and further education (TAFE). Decision-makers who are improving the quality of the teaching and learning experience in the fields of teaching and learning technologies, learning materials, and all education resources attended the previous conference and will be attending APEIC 2005.

More than 200 delegates from around the world with a focus on the Asia Pacific region are expected to attend. These figures are based on attendance at APEIC 2003.

The Destination

The conference venue, the University of Newcastle, provides a unique bushland experience. The University is nestled in the Hunter Region: a hidden jewel on the East Coast of Australia only 90 mins. North of Sydney, boasting pristine beaches, harbour views, the largest inland saltwater lake in Australia, mountains and the world-famous vineyards of the Hunter Valley.
