

Faculty of Science and Information Technology

Associate Professor of Design

School of Design, Communication and Information Technology

Position No. 1039

---

General Information

To be successful in this prominent role you will have a demonstrated commitment to the discipline of visual communication design both in research and teaching. You will be required to exercise a special responsibility in providing leadership and excellence in research, teaching and professional activities in the discipline. You will foster the research of groups and individuals as well as make a distinguished personal contribution to teaching. Your active role in the maintenance of academic standards and in the development of research and of curriculum development within the discipline will ensure continuing success for the School's programs in visual communication design and natural history illustration.

Your prior design industry experience and a proven track record in obtaining grants and producing published work will be highly regarded. Demonstrated expertise in supervising postgraduate students is also essential.

The position is available on a full-time, continuing basis.

Women are particularly encouraged to apply as they are under-represented at senior academic levels in the School/Faculty.

Selection Criteria

- A PhD or relevant research experience
- Experience in visual communication design practice
- University-based teaching and learning experience, including curriculum development and delivery
- Established research and scholarly activity, including a track record of securing external research grants and supervising research students.
- Evidence of a substantial publication record
- Interdisciplinary collaborations in practice, teaching or research
- Strong international links
