GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN TEACHING (SECONDARY)
MASTER OF TEACHING (SECONDARY)

NEWCASTLE.EDU.AU

WELCOME

We look forward to welcoming you to our postgraduate teaching programs at the University of Newcastle. Thank you for your commitment to excellence, equity and the future of our society.

We have seen in recent years, perhaps more than ever before, how instrumental teachers are to the future of Australia, and indeed the world. From the very first day of 'schooling from home' during COVID, parents became keenly aware of the art, science and magic of teachers and teaching. There has never been a better time to become a teacher.

Our Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and Master of Teaching (Secondary) programs will build upon your existing content knowledge and love of the amazing potential of children. Our goal is to prepare you to be an innovative educator who impacts the life of every child you have the privilege to teach.

The Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and Master of Teaching (Secondary) programs are delivered by our academic staff who are known globally for the impact of their research, are recognised for their best-practice approaches to learning and teaching, and are committed to providing students with a world-class experience throughout their study. You will have in-school experience from your first trimester, and will join our alumni who enjoy fantastic full-time employment rates upon graduation.

The journey in the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and Master of Teaching (Secondary) programs is fast-paced, intense and deeply personal. You'll be asked to challenge some of the ways your own schooling may have taken place, learn new pedagogies and theories to effectively teach diverse learners, and apply these learnings in your two major practica. We are so excited for you.

As a teacher of 40 years myself, I thank you so much for your decision to come to join the greatest profession of them all. I look forward to seeing you along the way.

Professor John Fischetti

Pro Vice-Chancellor,
College of Human and Social Futures

YOUR PATHWAYS TO TEACHING

The Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and the Master of Teaching (Secondary) programs at the University of Newcastle provide a postgraduate pathway into a highly successful and rewarding career in teaching.

The programs develop graduates who are outstanding teachers who act professionally, ethically and effectively in their professional contexts; who engage in critical inquiry in their practice; and who play a constructive leadership role in public discourse in and beyond education.

We offer two pathways to fast-track your teaching career:

THE GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN TEACHING (SECONDARY)

This 1 year full-time 120 unit program is delivered online in trimesters, and provides applicants with a pathway into the Master of Teaching (Secondary), for those seeking to be accredited with NESA to teach in one Key Learning Area only. Throughout the program you will have 65 days of professional experience, with in-school experiences each trimester.

Upon successful completion of this program, you will have guaranteed entry to the Master of Teaching (Secondary) and upon admission be eligible for 120 units of credit. You will then be able to apply for conditional accreditation with the NSW Education Standards Authority (NESA), essential for employment as a teacher in NSW. The remaining 40 units under the Master of Teaching (Secondary) can be completed either full time or part time.

Graduate Diploma in Teaching \(Secondary\)

MASTER OF TEACHING (SECONDARY)

Our innovative Master of Teaching (Secondary) program is delivered online with courses running in trimesters, allowing you to fast-track your teaching career in as little as 18 months.

The program has 65 days of professional experience, and with full-time or part-time study options, provides you with the flexibility to balance your study with other commitments.

Designed to accommodate students seeking to be qualified in 2-4 teaching areas (across a maximum of two Key Learning Areas), students in this 160 unit program are eligible to apply for conditional accreditation with NESA after reaching the half-way point, or provisional accreditation upon completion of the entire program. The program has 30 units of electives that can be used to broaden your knowledge, or meet NESA subject content knowledge requirements that may not have been met through your previous studies.

YOUR PATHWAYS TO TEACHING

STATE OF THE ART TECHNOLOGIES

Study with our state of the art technologies. Immerse yourself in our interactive simulation suite of technologies to develop your teaching knowledge and skills.

SimTeach, SimSchool, and SimCave provide hands on learning experiences that will prepare you to teach in a variety of schooling contexts and with diverse students. Studying with our leading-edge technologies will transform the next generation of teachers, education leaders and scholars.

SIMSCHOOL

SimSchool is a computer-generated classroom environment designed to introduce student teachers to the language of education and behavioural interactions of classrooms.

SIMTEACH

SimTeach is a live simulation experience where student teachers can practice instructional strategies with avatars operated by a real human. SimTeach creates realistic teaching interactions with diverse student characters reacting in real time.

SIMCAVE

SimCave is an 360° immersive environment that provides student teachers with the best of immersive learning experiences and the potential to use new digital media for deeper, creative and cultural learning.

ADMISSION AND PROGRAM INFORMATION

Applications for the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and the Master of Teaching (Secondary) in 2024 are submitted direct to the University of Newcastle via our online application portal.

All applicants must have a completed bachelor degree before they can be admitted to the program. If you intend to complete your bachelor degree by the end of 2023, you should apply now for 2024.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

To be admitted to the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) or Master of Teaching (Secondary), applicants must have a Bachelor or Bachelor Honours degree.

This qualification must satisfy the New South Wales Education Standards Authority (NESAs) requirement for accreditation and requires your undergraduate degree to align with at least one first teaching area of the secondary school curriculum.

For first teaching areas, this means that you must have completed a major, or three quarters of a year of relevant discipline study. In most degrees, this equates to six courses, with no more than two courses at first year level and no fewer than two courses at third year level.

If you wish to be qualified for an additional teaching area, you are required to have undertaken at least a minor, or half a year of relevant discipline study. In most degrees, this equates to four courses, with no more than two courses at first year level. Note that not all teaching areas can be undertaken as an additional teaching area.

Appropriate postgraduate studies may also be considered in satisfying the required number of discipline courses. In addition, the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) program includes one elective that can be used to top up any shortfall in the required number of discipline courses needed for a teaching area. The Master of Teaching (Secondary) includes three electives that can be utilised for the same purpose.

If you want to pursue an additional teaching area, you are encouraged to aim for related disciplines, as this will be most valuable for your future employment (ie, Science and Mathematics, History and Geography, English and Society and Culture).

You will need to complete a Teaching Area Nomination Form (included in this admission information pack) as part of your application.

Admission to the program is also based on a 500 word written piece of work. Full details of this task is outlined in the Application Checklist.

The following pages set out the requirements of each Teaching Area and are designed to assist you to identify if your undergraduate degree aligns with your chosen Teaching areas.

ENGLISH PROFICIENCY

An English language proficiency assessment is not required for registration as a teacher where the full four years of required higher education study (or qualifications assessed as comparable) have been undertaken in English in Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Canada and the Republic of Ireland.

All other applicants from overseas must complete an approved English language proficiency test.

Further information about the minimum English language proficiency requirements for this program can be found in the relevant section of the Program Handbooks:

Graduate Diploma in Teaching \(Secondary\)
Master of Teaching \(Secondary\)

Students seeking employment in Australia will also need to demonstrate that they have passed the national Literacy and Numeracy Test for Initial Teacher Education students (LANTITE) before they will be able to be graduated and accredited as a teacher.

INHERENT REQUIREMENTS

The study and practice of teaching requires respect for diversity; knowledge of theories, legislation, policies and procedures; effective communication; inter-personal, critical thinking and problem solving skills; and stamina to effectively work with children/young people, their families and communities. In addition to satisfying the content knowledge and English proficiency requirements outlined above, prospective applicants should also review the inherent requirements for the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and the Master of Teaching (Secondary) here.

KEY LEARNING AREAS

The Australian Curriculum, as taught in NSW schools, divides disciplinary knowledge skills and understanding into eight Key Learning Areas:

- English
- Mathematics
- Science
- Health and Physical Education
- Human Society and Its Environment
- Creative Arts
- Technology and Applied Studies
- Languages

Some of these Key Learning Areas are further sub-divided into multiple subject areas taught in schools (Teaching Areas).

Information about how the NSW Education Standards Authority structures the curriculum in terms of Key Learning Areas and Subjects, please refer to the NESA website.

TEACHING AREAS

The NSW Education Standards Authority (NESA) requires that for admission to a NSW graduate entry secondary teaching program, your undergraduate degree studies must align with the area or areas you intend to teach.

The following pages outline the content knowledge requirements for each Teaching Area. Use this information to identify how your undergraduate degree aligns with the areas you intend to teach. Complete the Teaching Area Nomination Form included in this Admissions Information Pack, and submit it with your online application.

Students applying for the Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) can select up to two Teaching Areas from within the one Key Learning Area.

Students applying for the Master of Teaching (Secondary) can select up to three Teaching Areas from across a maximum of two Key Learning Areas.

FIRST TEACHING AREAS

All Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) and Master of Teaching (Secondary) students must have at least one First Teaching Area (FTA). This is a requirement of the New South Wales Education Standards Authority (NESA) for you to receive teaching accreditation when you complete your Master degree.

A FTA requires you to have completed at least a Major of discipline study (such as pure maths, English literature, etc). You must have at least 6 semester-long courses of study in a specific area. No more than 2 of these courses can be at 1000 level (from the first year of your degree) and at least 2 of the courses must be at 3000 level (third year) or higher*

You must also meet any additional criteria set by NESA for that Teaching Area; e.g. to teach Mathematics you must have covered Algebra and Calculus in your tertiary study.

You can have more than one First Teaching Area.

ADDITIONAL TEACHING AREAS

Additional Teaching Areas are optional. It may be of value for your future employability to meet requirements for an Additional Teaching Area (ATA).

ATAs require you to have completed at least a Minor of discipline study. You must have at least 4 semester-long courses in a specific area. At least 2 of the courses must be at 2000 level (second year) or higher*

You must also meet any additional criteria set by NESA for the Teaching Area.

KEY POINTS:

- Master of Teaching (Secondary) applicants can select Teaching Areas from a maximum of two Key Learning Areas.
- Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) applicants can select Teaching Areas from only one Key Learning Area.
- All applicants must have at least one First Teaching Area.
Your previous studies must have included a major of 60 units of study, with at least 20 units at 2000 level (second year) and at least 20 units at 3000 level (third year)*
- Additional Teaching Areas are optional.
Your previous studies to have a minor of at least 40 units of study, including 20 units at 2000 level (second year) or higher*
- Applicants can select up to three Teaching Areas in their application.

* The Master of Teaching (Secondary) program has 30 units of electives that may be able to be used to make up a shortfall in the required units for a Teaching Area.

The Graduate Diploma in Teaching (Secondary) program has 10 units of electives that may be able to be used to make up for a shortfall in the required units for a Teaching Area.
