Adjunct Professor Robert Whittaker AM FRSN

Professor Robert Whittaker is a building industry professional practitioner, and a consultant with various fields of expertise which have long been recognised by his industry peers. Professor Whittaker is a Companion of the Institution of Engineers Australia, a Fellow of the Australian Institute of Building (Incorporated by Royal Charter, of which he was National President), the Australian Institute of Quantity Surveyors, and the New Zealand Institute of Building; and he is a Member of the Society of Construction Law.

Professor Whittaker has been extensively involved in industry reform to raise professional standards and accountability in order to protect the public - and has been recognised for his work by Government and industry alike at the highest levels. He has made a considerable contribution to the education of professionals for the construction sector - both in the University and TVET (TAFE) sectors - at a national level.

He holds professorial appointments concurrently at several universities including here at Newcastle, where he is an Adjunct Professor of Practice in Construction Management.

Professor Whittaker was admitted as a Member of the Order of Australia, specifically for his 'significant contribution to the construction industry as a leader and educator' as part of the 2014 Queen's Birthday Honours' List.

Internationally, Professor Whittaker is Deputy Chair of the International Building Quality Centre (IBQC) which he co-founded and was launched in 2020 by the Governor-General. The IBQC has gathered support from the International Codes Council of the US; senior past and serving judicial officers from the UK, Mali, Malawi, Ethiopia and Australia; educational and professional institutions from the UK, Europe, the US, Africa, Asia; and various construction industry icons.

Mr Craig Copeland

Craig Copeland began his academic career in 1979 graduating with a Bachelor of Science (Hons), followed by a Diploma in Education in 1986, both from this University. During that time he was the student representative on the Union and Sports Union Boards, he was an announcer on 2NURFM, played rugby league for the University and helped run the Biology Society and many others.

Following the completion of his first degree, Craig had lots of different short-term jobs, none quite grabbing his interest until he commenced a career in NSW Fisheries in 1989, protecting fish habitat from development. But he saw the biggest problem was habitats that had been lost historically – so he started some of the largest coastal wetland restoration projects in Australia including the Kooragang Wetland Rehabilitation Project. Kooragang was an outstanding success, and thousands of students used this project's sites for fieldwork during their degrees.

In 2003 he set up a dedicated program within Government to restore NSW waterways. This was the first of its kind in the country, which resulted in improved fish passage to over 15,000 kilometres of NSW waterway, among many other successes.

After a Churchill Fellowship in 2013, Craig founded OzFish Unlimited, a national charity supporting recreational fishers to restore fish habitat. More than 10 years on, OzFish is Australia's largest waterway restoration group with over 120 active projects across every state and territory delivering improvements in waterway health. It employs over 50 staff and has over 10,000 members and volunteers contributing to restoration annually.

Ms Karenne Jurd

With a career spanning clinical research, teaching, conservation, and local government, Karenne Jurd has dedicated decades to advancing environmental and community resilience. After graduating from the University of Newcastle with a BSc (Hons), Dip Ed Science, and the Silver Seahorse Biological Sciences Award, Karenne began doctoral studies before pursuing overseas travel and teaching science.

Returning to Newcastle, medical research utilising electron microscopy was soon complemented by activism, leading hundreds from the Hunter region to join the Franklin River blockade. This marked the beginning of a lifelong commitment to environmental conservation.

Founding the Newcastle Branch of The Wilderness Society (TWS), Karenne later joined the NSW campaign team, contributing to landmark achievements including the NSW Wilderness Act 1987, protection of the SE Forests, as well as recognition of the Daintree Rainforests, and advocacy for no mining in South Australian wilderness. As National Director of TWS in 1990, Karenne steered national campaigns that secured protections for iconic landscapes such as Kakadu, Shelbourne Bay, Purnululu, East Gippsland, and Tasmania's forests as well as the many smaller regional wild places.

After establishing a successful environmental education consultancy, Karenne returned to Newcastle in 1999. Turning to local government, she pioneered catchment management frameworks, secured multimillion dollar funding for integrated urban water cycle management, developed innovative natural asset accounting systems that now drive $13M annual investment in environmental renewal, and led the team that secured NSW's first Coastal Management Program for Stockton. Today, as Environmental Asset Manager, Karenne continues to champion nature-based solutions that strengthen biodiversity, community wellbeing, and climate resilience.
