His personal life, anchored by his marriage to Therese (Terry) Andrea Devine since May 1970, reflects a commitment to values that extend beyond the boardroom and into every aspect of his multifaceted life.

The Kennedy family moved to Canberra in 1958 where Bob completed school and joined the Commonwealth Bank as a teller whilst studying at the Australian National University part time. He completed a Batchelor of Economics in 1969 and graduated in May 1970.

Complementing his corporate achievements are his community contributions. In June 2018, Bob was awarded: Member of Order of Australia for his significant service to business and the community of the Hunter Valley.

As Chair of the Hunter Medical Research Institute (HMRI), he played a pivotal role in the realization of a $90 million research centre on the John Hunter Campus.

ALUMNI STORIES

Sam Martin-Williams

Bachelor of Business 1995,
Masters in Industrial Relations and Human Resource Management 2001,
Newton-John Alumni Medal 2004.

Growing up in the Hunter Valley, Samantha (Sam) Martin-Williams didn't have to look far for a world-class education. She began her university journey at the University of Newcastle, laying the foundations for a rich and diverse career in business and community leadership.

After graduating, Sam spent several years overseas working across executive and advisory roles, before returning home to take on CEO and senior executive positions across the public, private and not-for-profit sectors.

“Rooted in regional Australia and shaped by global experience, I've dedicated my career to purposeful leadership—driving transformation, championing women, and building stronger communities through business.”

Her return to Newcastle also marked a deepening connection with regional Australia, beginning with the Newcastle Permanent Charitable Foundation and later becoming the first female director of Newcastle Permanent in 2012.

Today, Sam is a professional company director. She is Chair of NGM Group, one of Australia's largest customer-owned banks, serving more than half a million Australians through Newcastle Permanent and Greater Bank. Sam is also the Chair of AUSFILM International, bringing together Australia's screen businesses and government agencies to promote Australia as a destination for international film and TV production. She serves as Deputy Chair of Newcastle Airport, a Non-Executive Director of Capricorn and Fishburners, is the NSW President of the Australian Institute of Company Directors and chairs our very own University of Newcastle Business School Advisory Board.

A former Telstra Business Woman of the Year, Sam is passionate about people-first business transformation and building high-impact partnerships. As a successful businesswoman, she is committed to creating platforms for local women and spearheaded the Mentor Walks initiative in the Hunter, which connects women at all stages in their careers.
