

SHAPING TOMORROW'S WORKPLACES

DR JOSH HEALY

Partnering with industry to create better future workplaces, jobs, and careers.

Dr Josh Healy is an expert in the future of work, employment, and industrial relations. His research spans employee well-being, labour market dynamics, and the workplace impacts of disruptive technologies. Collaborating with a diverse range of industry partners, Dr Healy has examined long-standing and emerging issues, such as job quality, workforce participation, gig work, workforce ageing, workplace leadership, and organisational performance, showing how these factors interact in contemporary labour markets. His expertise is shaping policies that enhance employment conditions and job satisfaction in the digitalised future of work.

COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

- Proven track record of productive research partnership with industry and government
- Multi-disciplinary expertise, across labour economics, industrial relations and HRM
- Imaginative applications of 'decent work' and 'high-performance work' principles
- Fluency in translating research findings for general audience via TV, radio, print media
- Breadth of methods to match any problem.

PARTNERS

- Australian Army
- NSW Department of Education

- Fair Work Commission
- Commonwealth Department of Health and Ageing
- National Centre for Vocational Education Research
- YouGov.

SUCCESSFUL RESEARCH APPLICATION

- Drawing on Reserves: Assessing civilian employer/manager support for employees' part-time military service
- The Future of Work in Australia: Anticipating how new technologies will reshape labour markets, occupations and skill requirements
- Skill Shortages: Prevalence, causes, remedies and consequences for Australian businesses
- Aged Care Workforce National Census.

MORE INFORMATION

Dr Josh Healy

T: +61 2 4913 8507

E: josh.healy@newcastle.edu.au

