

SCIE3003: Advanced Transdisciplinary Capstone

Callaghan

Semester 1 - 2024

THE UNIVERSITY OF NEWCASTLE
AUSTRALIA

OVERVIEW

Course Description

This course is for those who want to further develop the knowledge and skills they have gained in their degree to impact the real world now and in their future career. This course will see you create value on a real project by developing an evidence-based and sustainable, business case for an external client. The collaborative style of this course will see you and peers actively partnering your own learning with a broad range of expertise, evidence and experience.

Most critically, this course will give you on-the-ground experience working on real-world complex problems. Complex problems are often called 'wicked' problems: typically, they are high stakes and resist solution, and even resist agreed definition. Think climate change, biodiversity loss, the obesity epidemic, poverty and antibiotic resistance. The skills needed to work on complex problems are no longer a luxury. They are now considered essential for university graduates.

Graduates who seek to resolve complex problems will work in transdisciplinary teams using methods that work with, rather than ignore, complexity. You will learn how to be an agile member of a dynamic team, contributing your disciplinary expertise, and developing your transferable skills as you do. In doing so you will evidence new skills and leadership qualities.

The evidence-based approach you learn will be equally relevant for working in industry, undertaking applied research, applying for research grants, or creating your own entrepreneurial business. Service to our university's community will mean you can graduate from university already demonstrating your experience in addressing the big, challenging issues of our time.

In addition, this course gives you the opportunity to engage with working researchers and reflect on science practice across the University through discipline seminar programs.
